PLYLER.REALTOR

BOONE · BANNER ELK · BLOWING ROCK · VALLE CRUCIS

High Country Investment Property Guide

A local investor's framework for buying, renting, and building wealth in the NC mountains.

Andrew Plyler, REALTOR®/Broker
770.639.1233 · aplyler@brri.net · plyler.realtor
Blue Ridge Realty & Investments · Boone, NC 28607

Why Invest in the High Country?

The North Carolina High Country offers a rare combination of strong rental demand, constrained land supply, four-season appeal, and sustained long-term appreciation. Whether your goal is steady rental income, short-term vacation rentals, or long-term equity growth, this market rewards patient, locally-informed investors.

21,000+	3 Nearby	$1,000–$1,400	3,300+ ft
APP STATE STUDENTS	SKI RESORTS	PER BR/MO (2026)	ELEVATION

Three Investment Profiles

Profile 1: Student Rental Near App State

Boone's university market creates predictable, year-round demand. Houses and condos within walking distance or on AppalCART bus routes command premium rents and low vacancy rates. With per-bedroom rents now ranging $1,000–$1,400/month in 2026, multi-bedroom properties rented by the room offer compelling per-square-foot returns.

- Best property types: 3–5 BR houses, townhomes, condos near campus
- Average gross rent yield: 7–10% depending on proximity and condition
- A 4BR house at $1,100/BR generates $4,400/month gross revenue
- Leases typically run August–July aligned with academic calendar
- Relatively low maintenance compared to vacation rentals

Profile 2: Short-Term Vacation Rental (STR)

The High Country draws visitors year-round: skiers in winter, leaf-peepers in fall, hikers in summer, and families escaping heat in spring. Properties near ski areas or with mountain views command strong nightly rates on Airbnb and VRBO.

- Peak seasons: October (fall color), December–March (ski season), June–August (summer escape)
- Verify STR regulations before buying — rules vary by municipality and HOA
- Professional management typically runs 20–30% of gross revenue
- Furnished properties require higher upfront investment but command better rates

Profile 3: Long-Term Appreciation Play

Land and property in the High Country face natural supply constraints: mountains don't allow unlimited development. Buyers seeking long-term appreciation often focus on acreage, view lots, and properties in communities with strict building covenants that preserve value.

- Blowing Rock and Banner Elk corridors historically show strongest appreciation

- Creekfront and ridgeline properties carry premiums that compound over time
- Limited developable land creates structural floor under prices

Appalachian State University — the engine of Boone's rental market — surrounded by Blue Ridge fall color.

Due Diligence: What to Check Before You Buy

Item	Why It Matters
Zoning	Confirm residential, STR, and rental permissions with Town of Boone or Watauga County planning.
Septic/Well	Many mountain properties are on private well and septic — inspect both carefully.
HOA Rules	Some communities prohibit short-term rentals or limit rental terms. Read covenants thoroughly.
Flood/Slope	Check FEMA flood maps and slope stability, especially for creek-adjacent or steep-lot properties.
Seasonal Access	Verify year-round road access. Some private roads become impassable in winter.

Insurance	Mountain properties may require separate wind/hail riders. Budget accordingly.
Cap Rate	Calculate net operating income ÷ purchase price. Target 6%+ for residential rental.

> The most common mistake I see High Country investors make is buying based on vacation experience rather than investment fundamentals. I help clients separate emotional appeal from sound numbers.

Financing High Country Investment Properties

- Conventional investment loans: Typically require 20–25% down; rates 0.5–1% above primary home rates.
- Vacation home loans: If you occupy 14+ days/year, you may qualify for second-home financing (better terms).
- DSCR loans: Debt Service Coverage Ratio loans qualify based on rental income — ideal for STR investors.
- Local lenders: Community banks in Boone often have more flexibility on mountain properties than national lenders.
- 1031 Exchange: Selling another investment property? Defer capital gains by exchanging into High Country real estate.

Andrew Plyler
REALTOR®/Broker · Blue Ridge Realty & Investments
Born & raised in Boone · 40+ years High Country experience
770.639.1233 · aplyler@brri.net · plyler.realtor